

THE DANIEL OWEN
NEW WRITING COMPETITION

a sense of place

How observant are you?

Do you take notice of what is going on around you?

Do you people-watch? Do you blog? Twitter?

Could you tell other people about your life?

The people you see?

Clwyd Theatr Cymru Theatre for Young People are launching a new writing award to celebrate the life of one of Wales' best known writers, Daniel Owen, of Mold. You can see his statue next to the library. He died in 1895. We are looking for the authentic voices of today, who, like Daniel Owen, see the world they live in now, and can convey that in writing that shares that Sense of Place with the rest of the world.

If you want to put your observations, stories, poetry, ideas into words then download an application form from the following websites:

- www.ctctyp.co.uk
- www.clwyd-theatr-cymru.co.uk, or at
- www.danielowenfestival.com

Application forms are also available from your school or local library. Your words can be expressed in both English and Welsh.

Unlike some competitions there is no entry fee and you can enter work in both categories.

- Poem
- Play synopsis, with sample scene

Entrants must be between 12 and 21 years old.

The winner will be announced at The Daniel Owen Festival October 2011 at an awards evening hosted by Clwyd Theatr Cymru.

The short-listed works in both categories will be read by professional actors at the awards evening. The overall winner will receive an individual award to keep, sponsored by Brown Cow publishing.
